Goodification & Blurb

Goodification, a New York-based creative agency, helps companies and organizations define, promote, and sell their brands. They’ve worked with big names like Pepsico, Levi Strauss, and Verizon, as well as up and coming companies. Smart and strategic innovation is Goodification’s modus operandi. So when it came to promoting their own brand, they wanted their own materials to reflect that. And that’s why they produced a Blurb magazine.

“A Big-Impact, Low-Cost Leave-Behind

Anthony Dodero and his partners spent significant time considering their options. They felt they had an opportunity within the industry to go against the grain and do things a little differently. At the same time, they were very cost conscious. “We wanted to be able to leave something memorable behind at client meetings,” says Dodero. “With our Blurb magazines, we can afford to do that.” The magazine has become a huge part of Goodification’s brand identity; it’s the cornerstone of their 360° advertising and promotion efforts.

Everything starts with the magazine. Our website is laid out exactly like our physical magazine. This is important because it not only creates consistency, it also allows the viewer to reference our work easier—no matter what format they’re viewing.”

Blurb Makes Quality and Design Easy
The agency did their homework before choosing Blurb. “We used other online publishing platforms but always ran into difficulties here and there and were not fully satisfied,” says Dodero. “Blurb offered us ease of use with outstanding, consistent results time and time again. The customer service was also amazing and very helpful with resolving any issues that came up.”

Blurb + Adobe: A Designer’s Dream
The fact that Blurb has a plug-in for Adobe® InDesign®, the primary tool the agency’s designers use, was also a big draw. “The InDesign plug-in took all the guesswork out of formatting our layouts,” says Dodero. “Having this tool meant that we could just concentrate on the most important parts of our magazine—the design and the content.” Dodero says the magazine is getting rave reviews from prospects. “It’s definitely captured the attention of many potential clients, which is exactly what we aimed for,” he says.
